But the construction of the first section (from Sokolniki to Central Park) was initiated only in 1932. The length of this line was 11 kilometers. The construction lasted 3 years and it was called the record period of time by the world press. The Russian engineers carefully studied the existing underground systems abroad before working out their own project, which represents a significant improvement on the London system.

Safety was always one of the main concerns of London transport. In spite of the fact that trains often follow each other within seconds, it is said that the London Underground is the safest means of transport in the world. Automatic signalling is operated by the trains themselves. A programme machine controls routes. No accidents can happen through human weakness.

69. Прочитайте текст:

The system of the Underground is a complicated one, and you may have to change trains. At stations where this is necessary you will see, you are going to one of the main line stations from which long-distance trains run, a notice telling you to follow the green light or red. If you follow the green or red lights you will come to the right platform without difficulty.

The railway track of today is quite different from that used in the early days of railways. The first track had no ballast, the rails were made of wood and rested on heavy blocks of granite. But in general and fundamental concepts the modern railway track is not greatly different from that of a hundred or more years ago. As then, it consists of two parallel rails, supported on and fastened to a series of sleepers which are laid on a suitable material known as ballast. It's the foundation of the railway which holds the track in line and provides needed drainage.

74. Прочитайте текст:

Ties have a longer life and a far greater weight than those made of wood. The greater weight of concrete sleepers provides the greater stability of track. It's this factor, which has greatly contributed to increase speeds. That's why the weight of rails and length of track on reinforced-concrete sleepers are increased with every passing year in our country.

The combination of rails, sleepers, fittings, ballast, etc., is known as the track or permanent way. In some countries, temporary tracks were laid for conveyance of earth for the building up or the formation of a railway, and the permanent way was so called to distinguish the final layout from these temporary tracks.

76. Прочитайте текст:

It is not an easy job to build a railway. The railway is built on a strip of land which is called the right-of-way. The right-of-way must be carefully prepared for laying down the tracks. At first, it must be cleared from trees, bushes and then graded by special machines known as graders.

The history of railways is more than one century and half. During this period the permanent way has been substantially improved. In order to reduce the number of joints the rails are welded into continuous length. This continuous or long-welded rails have greater strength and provide a smoother running of trains as far greater speed.
